My Mexican Rose

By
KATHARINE KAVANAUGH

An illustration of two figures, a man and a woman, dressed in traditional Mexican clothing. The man on the left wears a long, patterned tunic and a sash with a large cross. The woman on the right wears a long, flowing dress with a floral pattern. They are holding a large banner that reads "SERGEL'S ACTING DRAMA". Above them is a decorative border featuring a tree and various fruits. The entire scene is framed by a stylized archway.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

SENORITA CARLOTA VALQUEZ.

GUADALUPE, Carlota's duena.

JACK NESBIT, an American.

LUIS PASCUAL, Carlota's cousin.

Copyright, 1912, by the Dramatic Publishing Company.

Plays about twenty minutes.

MY MEXICAN ROSE

SCENE.—Patio of the house of SENORITA VALQUEZ. In center of stage a small flower garden. Two steps R. leading off between 2nd and 3rd wings. A table and chair R. Bench or seat L. Low wall running across in rear, with gate in center. Arrange lights to throw late afternoon sunlight effect on garden.

Curtain music: A Spanish air.

[CARLOTA slightly changes her position at gate and softly sighs.]

GUADALUPE. [Looking up.] Santa Maria, Carlota Mio, is it ever to be sighs and tears? Where hast all thy brightness flown?

CARLOTA. [Comes slowly toward bench L. as she speaks.] Guadalupe, do you recall how many days remain to me of freedom? [Sits.]

GUADALUPE. But one, my little Carlota. Don Luis comes tomorrow to claim you as his bride.

CARLOTA. Tomorrow is the day, but he will come ahead of time, you see. Something tells me he will be here today.

GUADALUPE. It was your father's will that he be your husband on your twentieth birthday—if you had not found another before that time.

CARLOTA. [Dreamily.] If I had not found another! Guadalupe, did you ever hear of anyone falling in love with a person she did not know?

GUADALUPE. Santa Maria, how could that be?

CARLOTA. Every day for the past week a man has stopped out there [Points toward gate.] to water his horse. Sometimes he sings a bit of song, sometimes he speaks kindly to his horse, and—and—sometimes he gazes up at the windows of this house. I have seen him through the lattice every day. [GUADALUPE starts in dismay.] Ah, but he has not seen me. Guadalupe, I think I love that man.

GUADALUPE. [Raising her hands in horror.] Saints in Heaven, hear her!

CARLOTA. Today when he stops to water his horse, I am going to speak to him.

GUADALUPE. No, no, Senorita; that is impossible. You must not do it.

CARLOTA. But I will. My cousin Luis comes tomorrow to claim me for his wife, according to the will of my father. I hate my cousin Luis. I will never be his wife.

GUADALUPE. Then your entire fortune—even this house—will become the property of Luis Pascual.

CARLOTA. I do not care. Let the property go. I can be happy without it, but I could never be happy as Luis' wife.

JACK. [Heard singing outside the gate. He sings in a careless manner, as if his mind were more on attending to his horse.] Oh, it's all r-right in the sum-mertime, In the summer-time, it's l-lovely—

CARLOTA. [Starts to her feet.] Listen, 'tis he, my Americano. My guitar quick.

[GUADALUPE takes up guitar from table, gives it to Carlota, who returns to bench, and accompanying herself on the guitar, sings a few lines from a Spanish love song.]

JACK. [Appears at gate.] I beg your pardon—may I have a cup of water.

CARLOTA. Si, senior. Guadalupe.

[GUADALUPE places her knitting on table, goes off by way of steps R., waving her hands, and shaking her head.]

CARLOTA. [Crosses to R., lays her guitar on table.] Won't you come in, Senor, and rest?

JACK. [Enters. He wears picturesque riding suit.] Thanks. [Comes down L. c.] Do you know I've been trying to get in here for a week?

CARLOTA. Indeed, Senor? And why?

JACK. You see—I've passed here often—in fact—well, to tell the truth I go several miles out of my way to pass here; you see—I—I admire the—the flowers so much.

CARLOTA. And are there no other flowers in all Mexico, Senor?

JACK. [Goes closer to her.] None like the ones that grow here. That's a pretty one you have in your hair. [Touching the rose.] So many Spanish girls wear a rose right there. Why?

CARLOTA. Behind the left ear before they are engaged; behind the right ear afterward.

JACK. Do you know, I think it would look much more effective behind the right ear. Let's change it. [Reaches for rose.]

CARLOTA. [Drawing back.] No, no, Senor. I'm not engaged—yet.

JACK. Please let me. I want to see how you'll look when you are engaged.

GUADALUPE. [Enters with glass of water.] Your drink, Senor.

JACK. Oh, yes; thanks. I forgot I was thirsty. [Takes glass and drinks, returns glass to GUADALUPE. Exit GUADALUPE, R.]

CARLOTA. I have observed you many times passing this way, Senor.

JACK. Really? Well, I saw you for the first time a week ago, and I've been trying ever since to see you again.

CARLOTA. But why, Senor?

JACK. [Close to her.] Don't you know? It was love at first sight with me, little girl. [Tries to take her hand.]

CARLOTA. [Draws away.] Oh, no, Senor; I do not even know your name.

JACK. It's Nesbit—Jack Nesbit, of New York. What's yours?

CARLOTA. Carlota Valquez.

JACK. That's a pretty name—but I think Carlota Nesbit sounds better.

CARLOTA. I wonder if I dare to ask you one very great favor, Senor Nesbit?

JACK. If you'll only call me Jack I'll be your slave for life.

CARLOTA. You cannot mean that.

JACK. I do, so help me.

CARLOTA. Then listen, Senor Jack. I am going to take you at your word. First, I must ask you—oh, it is so terrible—I'm confused—I cannot—I blush, Senor. [Turns from him in confusion.]

JACK. Do it again. No, no, I mean—don't mind me—ask anything.

CARLOTA. [Turns to him.] Are you married, Senor?

JACK. [Astonished.] No, I don't think so—no, no, I know I'm not; in fact, I feel quite sure of it.

CARLOTA. Oh, I'm so glad. You can stay here and be my husband.

JACK. What! Hush—if it's a dream don't wake me.

CARLOTA. [Begins to laugh.] Oh, it's so funny.

JACK. Is it?

CARLOTA. You do not understand. I have not explained. You are to be my husband, but not really.

JACK. Oh, then, I ain't going to play. [Pretends to pout.]

CARLOTA. [Goes up behind him, touches his arm.] Just make believe, you understand? You do not even kiss me.

JACK. [Turns and takes her hand.] Oh, no, I'm not that kind of a husband.

CARLOTA. Only take my hand perhaps, so that he, Luis, will think it is real. But come, sit beside me; we have much to arrange before he arrives. [Crosses to L. and sits on bench.]

JACK. [Sits beside her.] He? Who's he?

CARLOTA. I will tell you, and when you know all you won't go away and leave me, will you?

JACK. Seventeen thousand horses couldn't drag me away.

CARLOTA. Tomorrow, Senor Jack, is my birthday—my twentieth.

JACK. Really? You don't look it.

CARLOTA. Be serious. When my father died he willed that I might marry some one of my own choosing before that day arrived. If not, I was to marry my cousin, Luis Pascual, whom I hate.

JACK. So do I.

CARLOTA. If, being still unmarried, I refuse my cousin, he is to inherit all my property. I will be penniless.

JACK. Well, don't you care; I've got plenty. [Kisses her hand.]

CARLOTA. Be serious, Senor.

JACK. Leave off that "senor," and I will.

CARLOTA. Jack, will you help me?

JACK. Only tell me what you want me to do?

CARLOTA. Today my cousin comes from Cortes. He will ask me to marry him. Oh, I have been beside myself all day, thinking of it.

JACK. Now that I'm beside you, it's all right.

CARLOTA. I knew—I hoped you would pass at this hour. When I heard your song, I answered. Your face, Senor, it is so good and honest.

JACK. Is that the best you can say of it?

CARLOTA. I thought that you would help me.

JACK. Carlota, you are the most beautiful thing in the world when you look like that. I will do anything under the sun you ask of me.

CARLOTA. When Luis comes, could we not pretend that we are married?

JACK. Pretend nothing. We will be. Where's the nearest Padre. [Is about to start off, reaches c. of stage.]

CARLOTA. [Rises, follows JACK to c, catches his hand.] No, you must not leave me. He might come before you returned and that would spoil all. We will pretend until my cousin Luis has gone back to Cortes.

JACK. All right, we'll pretend until he goes; after that we'll look up the Padre. But don't forget to call me Jack. You had better start right away so you'll be in practice, don't you think so?

CARLOTA. Yes, Jack.

JACK. [Takes ring from his little finger.] Here, we've got to have a ring. I never met a girl yet who would pretend about the ring. [Places ring on her finger, raises her hand and kisses it. Is about to draw her into his arms when LUIS appears at gate.]

LUIS. [Calls in angry tone.] Carlota!

CARLOTA. Luis! [Goes R. C.]

JACK. Oh, look who's here. [Goes L. C.]

LUIS. [Comes down c.] Carlota, what does this mean? Have you lost all sense of modesty; are you quite abandoned? [Turns to JACK.] As for you, Senor——

JACK. Well, what have you got up your sleeve for me?

LUIS. You are an Americano.

JACK. Well, that's nothing to be ashamed of.

LUIS. You are not one of our people; you do not understand the customs of our country.

JACK. What's that got to do with the situation?

LUIS. Senorita Valquez is my betrothed.

JACK. You're mistaken, my friend; this lady is my wife.

LUIS. What! Carlota, can this be true?

CARLOTA. Senor Nesbit speaks the truth, Luis.

LUIS. So you have tricked me. You have brought me here on a fool's errand.

JACK. Well, like a nice little fool, you can go back again.

LUIS. You are a scheming villain, Senor; you not only rob me of the woman of my choice, but you deprive me of the lands and property that should rightfully be mine.

JACK. Ah, there's where the shoe pinches, eh?

CARLOTA. You forget yourself, Luis. By my father's will I could marry whom I chose before my twentieth birthday. Senor Nesbit is the man of my choice, and the only one in the world I would have for my husband. This is my house; my husband is master here. It were best for all of us if you would return at once to Cortes.

LUIS. So I am ordered back to where I came from, eh? So be it. I go, but I leave behind me my curses—may you both be——

JACK. [Raises his hand.] Don't say it, Pascual; never swear in the presence of a lady. And you needn't leave any curses behind you—they wouldn't have any effect—see, I've got my fingers crossed. [Holds up hand.]

LUIS. [Goes quickly to gate, turns and speaks angrily.] Adois, Carlota; you will never see me again. [Exit.]

JACK. That's pleasant news. [To CARLOTA.] Have you any regrets, Carlota? [Holds out his arms to her.]

CARLOTA. [Comes to him.] None, Senor.

JACK. Then let us turn this pleasant make-believe into a reality.

CARLOTA. But it was to be only for today, Senor.

JACK. It is to be for all time, Carlota. I knew it the first day I saw you. Can't you learn to care for me?

CARLOTA. [Turns from him.] I'm afraid not, Senor.

JACK. I'm sorry. What's the reason?

CARLOTA. [Slyly.] Because one cannot learn what one already knows. I care now, Jack.

JACK. [Takes her in his arms.] You little sinner.

CARLOTA. But that is not a pretty pet name; can't you find a better one?

JACK. Yes, I'll call you "My Mexican Rose."

CURTAIN

Diamonds and Hearts

A Comedy Drama in Three Acts

By EFFIE W. MERRIMAN

Price, 25 cents

This play has become one of the most popular in America. The good plot, the strong "heart" interest, and the abundant comedy all combine to make a most excellent drama. "Bub" Barnes is a fine character of the Josh Whitcomb type, and his sister is a worthy companion "bit." Sammy is an excruciatingly funny little darkey. The other characters are good. Fine opportunity for introducing specialties. The play has so many good points that it never fails to be a success.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

BERNICE HALSTEAD, a young lady of eighteen, with an affection of the heart, a love for fun and hatred of arithmetic.....

AMY HALSTEAD, her sister, two years younger, fond of frolic....

INEZ GRAY, a young lady visitor, willing to share in the fun....

MRS. HALSTEAD, a widow, and stepmother of the Halstead girls

HANNAH MARY BARNES, or "Sis," a maiden lady who keeps house for her brother

DWIGHT BRADLEY, a fortune hunter and Mrs. Halstead's son by a former marriage.....

DR. BURTON, a young physician.....

SAMMY, the darkey bell-boy in the Halstead house.....

ABRAHAM BARNES, or "Bub," a yankee farmer, still unmarried at forty—a diamond in the rough.....

ATTORNEY; SHERIFF

Time of playing, two hours.

Two interior scenes. Modern costumes.

SYNOPSIS OF INCIDENTS

Act. 1. Parlor of the Halstead home. The young doctor. The three girls plot to make his acquaintance. An affection of the heart. "Easy to fool a young doctor," but not so easy after all. The step-mother and her son. The stolen diamonds. The missing will. Plot to win Bernice. "I would not marry Dwight Bradley for all the wealth the world contains." Driven from home.

Act 2. Kitchen of the Barnes' farm house. Bub takes off his boots. The new school ma'am. "Supper's ready." "This is our nephew and he's a doctor." Recognition. A difficult problem in arithmetic. The doctor to the rescue. "I'm just the happiest girl in the world." "I've come to pop the question, an' why don't I do it?" Brother and sister. "If it's a heifer, it's teh be mine." The sheriff. Arrested for stealing the diamonds. "Let me knock yer durned head off." The jewels found in Bernice's trunk.

Act 3. Parlor of the Halstead home. "That was a lucky stroke—hiding those diamonds in her trunk." The schemer's plot miscarries. Abe and Sammy join hands. The lawyer. "Bully for her." Bradley tries to escape. "No, ye don't!" Arrested. "It means, dear, that you are to be persecuted no more." Wedding presents, and a war dance around them. "It is no trick at all to fool a young doctor."

Joe Ruggles

OR

THE GIRL MINER

A Comedy Drama in Four Acts

By FRANK J. DEAN

Price, 25 cents

Nine male, three female characters. A vigorous, stirring play, depicting peculiar types of life in a large city and in the mining districts of the West. The parts of Joe Ruggles, the miner, Hans Von Bush (Dutch dialect), and Richard Hamilton, the scheming villain, all afford opportunity for clever work; while the part of Madge (soubrette), who afterwards assumes the character of Mark Lynch, is an excellent one for a bright young actress.

Scenery—City street, showing R. R. Station; rocky pass, with set cabins; a wood scene, and two plain interiors. Costumes of the day. Time of playing, two and a half hours.

SYNOPSIS OF EVENTS

ACT I Entrance to Railroad Station

Tompkin's Hired Man A Drama in Three Acts

By EFFIE W. MERRIMAN PRICE, 25 CENTS

This is a strong play. No finer character than Dixey, the hired man, has ever been created in American dramatic literature. He compels alternate laughter and tears, and possesses such quaint ways and so much of the milk of human kindness, as to make him a favorite with all audiences. The other male characters make good contrasts: Tompkins, the prosperous, straightforward farmer; Jerry, the country bumpkin, and Remington, the manly young American. Mrs. Tompkins is a strong old woman part; Julia, the spoiled daughter; Louise, the leading juvenile, and Ruth, the romping soubrette, are all worthy of the best talent. This is a fine play of American life; the scene of the three acts being laid in the kitchen of Tompkin's farm house. The settings are quite elaborate, but easy to manage, as there is no change of scene. We strongly recommend "Tompkin's Hired Man" as a sure success.

CHARACTERS

Asa Tompkins—A prosperous farmer who cannot tolerate deceit.

Dixey—The hired man, and one of nature's noblemen.

John Remington—A manly young man in love with Louise.

Jerry—A half-grown, awkward country lad.

Mrs. Tompkins—A woman with a secret that embitters her.

Julia—A spoiled child, the only daughter born to Mr. and Mrs. Tompkins.

Louise—The daughter whom Mr. Tompkins believes to be his own.

Ruth—Mr. Tompkin's niece, and a great romp.

Plays about two hours.

SYNOPSIS

Act 1. Sewing-carpet rags. "John and I are engaged." "Well, you can disengage yourself, for you'll never be married." "Mrs. Clark, she's took worse." Who makes the cake? Julia declines to sew carpet rags. "It would ruin my hands for the piano or my painting." Dixey to the rescue. "You take the rags a minute, child, and I'll just give that fire a boost." Dixey's story. "It breaks his heart, but he gives her away, an' he promises never teh let her know as how he's her father." Enter Jerry. "Howdy." John gets a situation in the city. Farewell. "It's a dandy scheme, all the same. We'll have our party in spite of Aunt Sarah." "Oh, I'm so happy." The quartette. Curtain.

Act 2. Chopping mince meat. The letter. Louise faints. "How dare you read a paper that does not concern you?" "You have robbed me of my father's love." The mother's story. Dinner. "I swan, I guess I set this table with a pitchfork." "Now, Lambkin, tell Dixey all 'bout it, can't yer?" "It looks zif they'd got teh be a change here purty darned quick, an' zif I'm the feller 'lected teh bring it 'bout." "None o' my bizness, I know, but—I am her father!" "It's love the leetle one wants, not money." "If I'd been a man, I'd never given my leetle gal away." "I'm dead sot on them two prop'sitions." Curtain.

Act 3. Dixey builds the fire. "Things hain't so dangerous when everybody's got his stummick full." The telegram. "It means that Louise is my promised wife." "By what right do you insinuate that there has been treachery under this roof?" "A miserable, dirty, little waif, picked up on the streets, and palmed off upon my father as his child!" "Oh, my wife, your attitude tells a story that breaks my heart." "Yeh druve her to do what she did, an' yeh haint got no right teh blame her now." "Friend Tompkins, a third man has taken our leetle gal an' we've both got teh larn teh git along without her. We kin all be happy in spite o' them two sentimental kids." Curtain.

This play was written by one of the most popular of American dramatists, whose works have sold by the hundreds of thousands. One of the best plays of its class ever written. Splendid characters. Powerful climaxes. Bright wit. Merry humor. Very easy to produce. Requires only three scenes. No shifts of scenery during any act. Costumes all modern. No difficult properties required.

THE AUTHOR'S OPINION

MR. TOWNSEND says of this drama: "I consider that 'Uncle Rube' is far superior to any play depicting country life that I have yet written."

This is the play for everybody—amateurs as well as professionals. It can be produced on any stage, and pleases all classes, from the most critical city audiences to those of the smallest country towns. Printed directly from the author's acting copy, with all the original stage directions.

Hageman's Make-Up Book

By MAURICE HAGEMAN

Price, 25 cents

The importance of an effective make-up is becoming more apparent to the professional actor every year, but hitherto there has been no book on the subject describing the modern methods and at the same time covering all branches of the art. This want has now been filled. Mr. Hageman has had an experience of twenty years as actor and stage-manager, and his well-known literary ability has enabled him to put the knowledge so gained into shape to be of use to others. The book is an encyclopedia of the art of making up. Every branch of the subject is exhaustively treated, and few questions can be asked by professional or amateur that cannot be answered by this admirable hand-book. It is not only the best make-up book ever published, but it is not likely to be superseded by any other. It is absolutely indispensable to every ambitious actor.
